Vernessa Glover

Have you ever thought about how to get an advanced degree while keeping up with your full time job? Ever struggled with how to manage your staff and your household all at once? Has the urge to step out in a completely new direction ever kept you up at night? Am I on the right path? These issues are some of the hurdles that our speaker this month has grappled with, overcome, and used to carve out her own path to success.

You don't have to stick to the status quo!

Join IWIL at our November luncheon to engage with and hear from Vernessa Glover, Executive Director of Children's Hospital and Women's Services at HSHS St. John's Hospital. Find out how she used her experience as a nurse, a mother, a business woman, and a patient herself to chart her own course and find the most ideal career opportunities while continuing to lead with passion and purpose. Vernessa's career path has taken her on the journey from charge nurse, to clinical supervisor, then project manager to business manager, and now, Executive Director. From the operating room to the board room, this dynamic young leader has taken opportunities at every turn to embrace leadership roles, continue her education, put her family first, and have courageous conversations when needed.

While there is no single path to success, knowing how others have pulled it off can help you chart your own course. Hear from our speaker this month about how she secured positions outside of the typical path trajectory. Gain ideas and tips you can use when forging your own career success.

"We have found in her tenure at St. John's that she's able to inspire the people she works with to honor our mission. One of the great things about Vernessa is she can bring people together around a vision and move everybody to achieving the common goals necessary to meet that mission."

—Dr. Charles Lucore, HSHS St. John's Chief Executive Officer
